EDITOR'S VIEW

The Evolving Horizons is the official journal of Satyapriya Roy College of Education. It is an international, peer reviewed journal with an interdisciplinary ethos across all aspects of social sciences, humanities, science, and languages. Today, interdisciplinary learning at all levels of education system has become common aspect as it combines subject areas to find synergy, creative solutions, and new perspectives. An interdisciplinary studies major allows students to tailor a degree to their interests. In an interdisciplinary subject, students explore and integrate multiple perspectives from different disciplines, sub-disciplines, and areas of expertise. An interdisciplinary approach involves drawing appropriately from several disciplines (or separate branches of learning or fields of expertise) to redefine problems outside of normal boundaries and reach solutions based on a new understanding of complex situations. This type of study allows the student to learn by making connections between ideas and concepts across different disciplinary boundaries. Students learning in this way can apply the knowledge gained in one discipline to another different discipline to deepen the learning experience. An interdisciplinary perspective involves integrating knowledge and methods from multiple academic disciplines to gain deeper insights into complex issues.

Interdisciplinary research is a type of study or research that draws from two or more disciplines to gain a more well-developed perspective, or discover something new. For example, American studies involve a considerable amount of interdisciplinary research in fields such as sociology, history, anthropology, and political science.

For a field like environmental studies, on the other hand, interdisciplinary research can be a challenge. Because it is a physical science, environmental studies may employ quantitative methodologies, like surveys, which are used to collect large amounts of observational or statistical data. Although this is common in most physical sciences, environmental studies also involve people and their attitudes towards nature, which could be understood through a sociological or legal perspective. Unlike the previous example, this type of research would require going from a physical or life science to a social science, which has a very different way of collecting or analyzing data.

The need for interdisciplinary idea arises from the ever-increasing complexity of the problems to solve, and modern challenges are very much interdisciplinary. Higher education systems and governments attempted to establish alternative modalities of education after the period of necessary social distancing and all the stakeholders in the academic field have proved their expertise in the teaching learning system.

The New Education Policy has been launched in the year 2020 in India and academic community has the responsibility to improve the standard of education in our country. To fulfil some of the objectives of NEP 2020 the scholars, Teachers and academicians have the responsibility to the research output in disseminating the results in the society by writing research papers. The Evolving Horizons, an International Peer review journal is a collaborative process that allows independent experts in the same field of research to evaluate and comment on manuscript submissions. The outcome of a peer review gives authors feedback to improve their work and, critically, allows the editor to assess the paper's suitability for publication. People that are involved in the peer review process include editors, reviewers, authors, and editorial board members. The authors must submit the papers according to the guidelines and maintaining the journal ethics.
